COMPLETE PLANS FOR THE ANNUAL CO. SEAT FAIR

Officers Meet With Department Heads and Finish
The Details

TO OPEN OCTOBER 4TH

Extensive Building Operations
Are Now Under Way
At Grounds

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 13.—Officers and department heads of the Doylestown Fair Association met at the fair grounds and completed the final preparations for the fifth annual Doylestown Fair to be held October 4 to 8, inclusive.

In every department increased entries have been promised. Extensive building operations under way on the fair grounds at the present time, together with the promise of horseman that close to 100 head of harness horses and fifty head of runners for the races to be held every afternoon of the fair, indicates that the 1927 exhibition will be the finest in the history of the fair association.

It was reported last night that concession space amounting to $3075 had already been sold, an amount considerably in advance of this time last year, and with a large amount in addition being contracted for through the secretary's office.

Over 2000 premium lists were mailed out yesterday to every exhibitor who has attended the fair during the past three years. All entries will close this year on Tuesday, September 27.

In addition to the new display building of the Doylestown Business Men's Association, the P. O. of A., the Plumsteadville Grange and the Warrington Y. P. B. are erecting permanent buildings, indicating the increased interest in permanent building construction at the fair grounds.

Extensive improvements have already been made to the various cow barns, horse barns, stables and display buildings. New roadways have been made and old ones resurfaced. The drainage system has been greatly improved and water connections have been made in cow barn.

Seventeen more box stalls have been added to the horse stables so that 125 head can be accommodated. The grandstand and office have been repaired.

Increased interest in the fair is being shown this year by residents of Trenton, Norristown, Lansdale, and as far as Lehigh County. The secretary's office is daily asked for information concerning the fair by residents of those sections.

An aisle floor is being laid in the women's building and show cases this year be placed in the baking department.

Thomas Hunt, of Lambertville, director in charge of the horse show department this year, reported last night that a large number of saddle horses will be entered in the show. He especially made a plea for a large entry of farm teams this year and in the various other farm classes.

The cattle show this year will be the largest on record. Walker Jackson, of Feasterville, department manager, reported last night that 165 head had already been signed up in the various classes. The same condition is true of the hog and sheep department, of which George A. Neff, of Doylestown, is department manager.

An appeal was made last night by Dr. H. W. Turner, of New Hope, president of the fair, for an increased interest in the Grange exhibits. For the past few years but two or three Granges have been competing for prizes and an effort will be made this year through the County Farm Agent, to have five or six exhibits by Granges.

Warren Fretz, manager of the dog and pet department, reported that over 100 entries are already in view, while the poultry show will again pass the 500-entry mark.

Horace Wilgus, of Philadelphia, vice-president of the fair, reporting for the speed department, stated that horsemen are looking forward to the races here with great interest and are well satisfied with past treatment and with the purses offered this year. He stated that with Doylestown Fair following Trenton Fair, practically all of the Trenton entries will come to Doylestown. There will be harness and running races every day. The Huntingdon Valley Hunt Club and other enthusiasts of the running game, have promised at least fifty head of runners for the various events.

Various other department heads who reported last night that increased interest and more entries than ever are being received this year included: Albert H. Vasey, of Lumberville, farm produce; Horace G. Broadhurst, of Holcon, fruit; Horace Livezey, of Davisville, vegetables; Charles Worthington, poultry; Mrs. Ralph Dunn, of Mechanicsville, and Mrs. George G. Bennett, Yardley, sewing; Mrs. Howard Funk, New Hope, and Mrs. Harvey Price, Carversville, baking; Mrs. Albert H. Vasey, of Lumberville, and Mrs. J. Howard Paxson, of Lumberville, preserving, pickling and canning; Mrs. Reuben P. Ely, New Hope, arts and crafts; Miss Emma Trego Fell, of Holcon, flowers; Mrs. E. D. Darlington, of Doylestown, antiques.

Injured While Boarding Moving Train At Croydon

A youth of 17 was injured as he endeavored to board a moving train at the Croydon station this morning shortly before seven o'clock.

The injured, Richard Kasperitis, Croydon.

A number of passengers had gone aboard the train, which was bound for Philadelphia, and it is thought that Kasperitis, a trifle late, was endeavoring to jump aboard as the train started to pull out.

Apparently he was dragged, as he was picked up at the bridge, west of the station.

Kasperitis has been in the habit of taking the 6.50 train for Torresdale. He was brought to the Harriman Hospital, where his injuries are being attended to. It is thought that he has a broken leg.

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 13.—Thirty-three women, members of the executive committee of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, including the presidents and committee chairmen of the clubs, by resolution, authorized the corresponding secretary to write to the proprietors of the moving picture theatres of Bucks County to inform them the women of Bucks County would not patronize their shows if "Fatty" Arbuckle pictures would in the future be exhibited in their theatres.

The meeting was held at the home of the president of the federation, Mrs. Irvin M. James, West Court street, for the purpose of outlining a plan of activities for the next twelve months and to arrange a tentative program for the fall meeting of the federation to be held at the Bucks County Country Club, at Langhorne, on Friday, October 28. Mrs. James, the president, was hostess to the women and served an informal luncheon.

The committee decided to award cash prizes of $5 to the junior and senior club of the county federation showing the greatest increase in membership during the year.

Another matter of interest discussed resulted in the formation of a humane society auxiliary in connection with the county federation. Stultifying The Fathers' Association

(EDITORIAL)

THE Fathers' Association was organized some four years ago for the purpose of co-operating with the public school authorities of the Borough in whatever way that Association could be helpful to them in the discharge of the duties that the school authorities were elected or appointed to perform.

Since its organization, the Fathers' Association has been helpful in ways too numerous to mention, and especially so in giving credit and encouragement to the members of the School Board for the intelligent and progressive manner in which those members have discharged the duties of their offices.

To all outward appearances this co-operation and encouragement has been the unanimous sentiment of the Fathers' Association, so that one would very naturally conclude that every member of that organization would be enthusiastic for the continuance in office of members of the School Board whose course of action from time to time they have so highly commended.

What was our surprise, therefore—and it must have been shared by a majority of the members of the Fathers' Association—to learn on about the last day for filing nomination petitions for the September Primary, that the John F. Smoyer Independent Party had placed in the field for School Director, a nomination against the candidacies of Louise L. Fabian and Jacob H. Young, two outstanding members of the present Board, whose petitions to succeed themselves had been on file for many days prior to the filing of the papers of the Independent candidate.

This surprise is in no wise lessened by the fact that Smoyer is an active member of the Fathers' Association and has joined—or at least has pretended to join—in all the applause and approval which the Fathers' Association has bestowed upon the work of the School Board.

Smoyer's unwarranted embarrassment of the Fathers' Association would have been bad enough, had he contented himself, as a member of that Association, with filing the nomination papers of a third candidate for the two places that are to be filled; but what must have been the humiliation of the members of that Association when they learned that on Wednesday evening last, Smoyer, speaking at a meeting held in the Sixth Ward, urged his hearers to vote for the Independent candidate alone, and for no other candidate for the School Board—thus doing everything in his power to defeat either Mrs. Fabian or Jacob Young for renomination.

Just how the Fathers' Association is to disclaim and disavow this treacherous and stultifying action of one of its members, and thus relieve itself of the embarrassment and humiliation that Smoyer's action has thrust upon it, is a matter for the membership of that Association to decide. Of course, the Association would be relieved, and the atmosphere cleared, were Smoyer to resign from membership immediately. But he is hardly the type to make even such amends.

His failure to resign would seem to leave the Fathers' Association but one alternative, namely, of indicating to him that his continued membership in that Association is entirely out of harmony with the aims and purposes of the Fathers' Association. And we would suggest that a meeting for that purpose could very properly be called for Tuesday evening next, September 20th, by which time the voters of the First Ward will have taken advantage of their opportunity to eliminate him from further participation in the public affairs of the Borough, for activities quite as perfidious and detrimental to the Borough's interests as his present underhanded work would be injurious to the public school activities, were he to be successful in his attempt to defeat one or the other of two tried and experienced School Directors.

Futile

BUT SEARCH CONTINUES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (I.N.S.)—Avia N. Warren, American consul at St. Johns, reported to the State Department today that the wreckage of the Old Glory was being brought into St. John's aboard the government steamer Kyle. He said that efforts to find the plane's crew had been unsuccessful.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Sept. 13 (I.N.S.)—The steamship Kyle, which picked up wreckage of the lost plane Old Glory in the North Atlantic, continued the search today for traces of the three occupants of the plane—Lloyd Bertand, James D. Hill, navigators, and Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror.

Part of the Old Glory was picked up by the Kyle about 100 miles from the position where the airplane had sent out an S.O.S. call. Word of the finding of the wreckage was contained in the following radiogram from Douglas Muir, a newspaper reporter on board the Kyle, to the Daily Mirror:

"Located wreckage of Old Glory in latitude 51.17 north, longitude 39.23 west at 4.20 o'clock Monday afternoon. No signs of crew. Particulars will follow."

The Kyle had been chartered by the New York Daily Mirror to search for the missing plane. According to the position given by Muir, it is believed that the wreckage drifted northward after striking the water.

It is generally believed that the three men were drowned.

Edward J. Loeffler, of Philadelphia; Charge, aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery; grand jury ignored the bill and placed the costs on the county.

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 13.—At the opening of the September term of criminal court yesterday the grand jury, of which Albert Butler, East Rockhill township farmer was appointed foreman by Judge William C. Ryan, ignored bills against six Philadelphia men arrested for attempting to commit felonious entry at China Hall, headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan at Croydon last July.

Those arrested in the affair were Edward J. McGee, 3118 Ruth street; John Davis, 2724 Waterloo street; Michael Troy, 1829 Hart Lane; James Mermer and Nicholas Conklin, 3029 Collins street, and Edward J. Loeffler, of Croydon. All but Loeffler, were charged with attempting to commit felonious entry, and Loeffler, who was janitor at China Hall, was charged by McGee, with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery.

The men had hearings before Justice Irvin M. James at Doylestown on July 25 and were held for the action of the grand jury. Yesterday that body ignored the bills against all the defendants in the case and placed the costs on the county. At the hearing in Doylestown, McGee and Mermer were also charged with the theft of five loaves of bread and some doughnuts from a chain store at Croydon.

The grand jury also ignored a bill yesterday against Deputy Constable Howard R. Sattler, of Bristol township, charging him with obstructing service of process, and placed the costs on the county. He was arrested on the information of H. Lincoln Hughes, a Bensalem township police officer, and was arraigned before Justice Irvin M. James at Doylestown.

At the hearing in the case before Justice James last May, Officer Hughes testified that on the evening of April 8 he arrested Frank Crosley, aged 18, of Croydon, for operating an automobile in a reckless manner. Hughes stated that he told Crosley to appear before Justice Walmesley the following day for a hearing. The defendant failed to appear and upon this Justice Walmesley issued a summons for him to appear at a later date. After receiving the summons, Hughes said that Crosley took it to Deputy Constable Howard R. Sattler, who, upon seeing it, found it was not the necessary legal form and told Crosley it would not be necessary for him to appear before Justice Walmesley. Officer Hughes then had Deputy Constable Sattler arrested for obstructing service of process, a criminal offense.

William Clapperton, of 31 Garfield avenue, Trenton, N. J., pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Ryan to operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs and serve three months in the Bucks County Prison. Clapperton, who was arrested by Chief of Police Cooper, of Morrisville, told the Court yesterday that he had had but two "drinks" when arrested.

There are seventy-five cases on the trial list for the present term. Judge Ryan is being assisted by Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, Pa. Jury trials got started this morning when the traverse jury reported.

In the Court of Common Pleas yesterday, Judge Ryan granted a divorce to John Schweitzer, of Dublin, who sued his wife, Anna Schweitzer, for divorce. The divorce will be granted upon payment of costs.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday a petition was filed by the voters of Perkasie, second ward, asking (Continued on Page Four)

THE BILLBOARD NUISANCE

The United States is known as a motoring country, which is all well and good; and the United States is spoken of as an advertising country, which is also well and good. But sometimes those things which speak well of a nation or people conflict.

In the instance of the two above, this is true without a doubt. For the motoring American is lamenting the fact that the advertising American is going a little too far. The latter is charged by the former with dotting the splendid highways, that link our great cities, with large billboards, consequently cutting off advantageous views of America's great open spaces.

Americans are justly looked upon as enterprising advertisers, and are to be congratulated upon their campaign methods. The illustrations take the eye; the language is to the point; and all in all each "ad" is designed to claim the attention of the passerby.

One motorist recently bewailed the fact that at the bend of a fine Bucks County road, just on the crest of a hill, the merits of a certain article were being told to the public, via the billboard route. "The view of that fine expanse of a Bucks County Valley is consequently cut off," he remarked. Is he not justified?

At each turn of the road, at every cross-roads, and even along the straight-away are these messengers of the manufacturers making blotches of color upon the land, hiding as it were the pleasantly-blending colors of forest, field and stream.

Our answer comes without hesitation—the motorist is justified in his complaint.

TARDIEU ON THE DEBT

Alarmed by the storm it raised in this country, Andre Tardieu, French high commissioner to the United States during the war and now a member of the French cabinet, has repudiated a statement, attributed to him, to the effect that the French-American debt agreement is dead because no French parliament would think of ratifying the Berenger-Mellon agreement.

M. Tardieu's repudiation might be accepted but for his recent book, "France and America," in which he expressed the very thought contained in the statement of which he denies authorship. The book was an argument for debt cancellation.

Under the Berenger-Mellon agreement France would pay but 50 cents on the dollar on the three billion dollars she borrowed from the United States during the war. Tardieu thinks this demand upon his country exorbitant, and yet France will collect from Germany next year reparations ten times greater than her payment to the United States would be.

Tardieu's book admits the Allies would have been beaten by Germany in 1917 but for American dollars, yet he says it is impossible to consider repaying to this country one-tenth of the war indemnity collected from Germany. One doubts if even the tax-burdened French can see the fairness of such reasoning, though it comes from one of their countrymen.

French politicians may think "between us there was but one business tie—a dead and putrid tie—our debts," but the rank and file of French and Americans know the tie that binds them is too strong for debts and politicians to break.

A war isn't over until the last two survivors have for the last time called one another liars.

Irish Hearts

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Kildare and her father emigrate to America from Kildare, Ireland, following Emmet Murtough, to whom Sheila is betrothed. Neither of the men will hold steady jobs in New York City, Murtough becoming a truck driver for a band of bootleggers. Sheila makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer, whose kindness interests her. Murtough is involved with Clarice Clancy, a cabaret girl. At the night club she is approached by a mysterious man who wants to know Murtough.

"Who's the other one?" asked the thin leader.

"Don't know him. Think I've seen him around, but all these guys look alike to me. The ones that wear their hair slick. He seems familiar, but I can't place him."

"Do you think this girl will come through?"
"Maybe, he's not wise enough to be suspicious, and if we can line him up we'll take Marnie Cocker for plenty. That ship he's got on the way in has got a hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of uncut stuff if its got a drop. And it's stuff we can cut three times and it'll still be good!"

The music stopped and the conversation among the three was silenced. Leisurely they paid their accounts and bidding farewell to Clarice and Clancy they passed out into the street. The three parted quickly in front of the door and each hailed a different taxi-cab, though all gave the same address, a very quiet and orderly family hotel downtown.

"He won, mother, he won!"

CHAPTER IX

Rory O'Shea's Battle.
Mrs. O'Shea herself climbed the three flights of stairs that led to the Kildare apartment to invite Sheila and Old Tom down to hear announcement, round by round, of the fights at the Garden over the radio. Old Tom demurred at first, as he still was ashamed of quitting his job with Tim O'Shea, but the novelty of radio tempted him. They were the only guests. The other children of the O'Sheas all owned homes and no equipment of their own. Not only that, but jobs to go to early in the morning. They couldn't afford to be wasting their sleeping hours by visiting the old folks in the midweek. At least, so old Mrs. O'Shea assured Sheila.

Michael O'Shea censored the reception. He experimented with one station after another, catching a raucous concert by one of the most popular jazz orchestras, or by reference to the daily program he would manage to capture a program of old-fashioned songs of which Kathie, his wife, was so fond. But he kept his ear on the station broadcasting from the Garden that night, and when the preliminary bouts were uninteresting he shut them off preemptorily. So carefully did he time his return to the Garden station that they caught even the few introductions of other lightweights which immediately preceded the O'Shea-Campeau bout.

The eyes of the proud mother and father lighted when the announcement came that their Rory had entered the ring. The cheers for O'Shea that swept the huge hall brought an electric tingle to the cheeks of Sheila. Here was a hero! Campeau's reception was not so sweeping for the French lad had not yet won the hearts of the fans. Too few had seen him in action to have become true hero worshippers.

The preliminaries to the bout were short. The management was anxious to get on to the Brown-Mulloy go. The managers of the heavyweight fighters had already warned the promoter repeatedly not to occasion any unnecessary delay no matter how popular the rest of the card proved to be with the crowd.

The first and second rounds were without much interest. The men had fought each other before and they were wary of the pitfalls which they knew existed. Toward the end of the second the "boo" chorus began, but it was short lived. There was a sharp exchange, toe to toe, just as the bell rang and the warmed up fans applauded.

"Take him Rory, take him!" "Carry the fight to the frog!" "Go on Campeau!" "Mix it up, mix it up!"

The bell for the third round quieted the audience. Campeau and O'Shea opened up now. Rory to his own satisfaction had found that the two previous rounds had left him hardly with a sweat. He sprang from his chair to meet Campeau near the latter's own corner. Returned confidence made Rory the quicker and he carried the fight to his rival. But Campeau remained unharmed. The youth of the boy was holding out gamely against Rory's superior ringmanship. Experience and youth equalized the fighting qualities of the two men and while the round of fast fighting lifted the galleries to their feet, neither man showed appreciable damage and the round was even, just as had been the first two.

Sheila was now thoroughly aroused and excited. The calling of blows meant nothing to her, for she did not understand the language of the prize ring but when the voice of the announcer rang out: "Campeau draws first blood with left jab," Sheila felt her heart jump but was quickly reassured when old Mrs. O'Shea put in quietly, "Rory always did bleed easily in the nose, even when he was a baby."

It was the end of the sixth round that Rory began to feel the pace. He had carried the fight to the other and had delivered as much punishment as he had taken, but he feared Campeau's quicker recovery due to youth.

"Take it careful, Rory," whispered Jimmy Tree as he and Reagan sponged him down. "No more chances now. You can go the twelve rounds easy and you've still got the punch that'll win, if you wait for it. Tire him out a bit and take it easy. He'll probably start in to finish you now. Let's hope he does. Just wait and shoot it home; and don't waste a single one. If you haven't got it pointed, don't shoot! You're going fine and remember you can do only what you think you can do!"

The sixth proved unsatisfactory to the crowd. Campeau rushed his opponent, but skillful Rory easily avoided these onslaughts and forced Campeau to waste precious strength in efforts against the wily older man. Campeau deserved the round for sheer aggressiveness, but Rory walked to his chair with a smile and waved to a couple of newspaper writers who yelled good luck to him.

"That's the stuff, Rory," Reagan cried. "You're fresher now compared with him than you were at the end of the fourth. It's a win you'll get sure out of this."

"Now, for the lucky seventh," said Rory as he spat out the water and relaxed for those precious ten seconds that precede the bell.

Campeau was more wary this round. Each man felt out his opponent trying to judge the remaining strength and stamina in the other. And as the seconds passed in this skillful fencing Rory actually felt new vitality sweep into his body. Still he waited. He knew he must win by a knockout and he must be sure that the opening was made to order. Campeau advanced, there was an exchange of jabs and Rory sent his right to the jaw. It rocked Campeau and O'Shea followed it with his left. Campeau's body bent and he started to the floor but before his knees touched the canvas Rory shot his right again. It went home truly and Campeau was out, knocked unconscious without so much as a bruise to show where the blow had landed on his chin.

"One! Two!" the count came slowly across the air and into the little apartment where mother and father waited and a girl listened wide-eyed and confused. Here was suspense but by the time the call of "fight!" had sounded the cheers and the cries of Rory O'Shea's name left no doubt as to the winner.

"He won, mother, he won!" Old Mike shouted and even Old Tom Kildare cried, "Good boy, Rory, good boy!" "God Bless him," added his mother. Sheila alone was silent. She did not know what to do or what to say, but she was glad that Rory had won his fight.

The colorful scene as it was described by radio was not without its shock to Sheila. Brutal calls of the gallery fans for blood had sickened her. It seemed unfair for her, unmanly for men to howl for two of their own kind to try to slaughter each other. The business of the Great War had hardly touched at Killamau, save for the half dozen out of the whole country-side who had gone into it.

REO FLYING CLOUD

She is the "Ideal" of the Engineers

SHE is not an eight nor a four but a six—the ideal engine, say the engineers.

—She is not 116" long, nor 126", but exactly 121"—the ideal length, say the engineers.

—She does not have a valve-in-head motor nor a sleeve valve motor, but an L-Head motor—the ideal type, say the engineers.

—She does not have cantilever springs, neither worm gear nor hypoid gear final drive, nor a four-bearing crankshaft, but she does have half-elliptic springs, spiral bevel gear final drive and a seven-bearing crankshaft—all ideal, say the engineers.

—She has none of the old and the obsolete, she does not offer you in 1927 the features of 1925, but from stem to stern, from roof to road, she is entirely new.

—No other car in the world today even approaches the Flying Cloud in its identity with the Engineers' Ideal Car.

—That is why a leading automotive paper has said that the Reo Flying Cloud is "the only feature in an otherwise colorless automobile season."

The Flying Cloud is a Pleasure Car

—She is a pleasure to see, to ride in, to drive, to own.

—She brings to motoring a thrill that mere passenger cars never had.

—She makes old cars obsolete and many of the newest dear at any price.

—Be sure to try one out. Then you'll understand why the engineers say that such a car is ideal. You'll know that a car rightly designed and built can give you more than transportation, can make traveling a pleasure at all times.

How 150 Automotive Engineers Agreed Upon An "Ideal" Motor Car

The Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automotive Engineers held a contest in January for the design of an "Ideal Car" for the American Family. 150 leading engineers competed and their specifications were synthesized into a composite set of specifications for an "Ideal Car"—that dream of all engineers.

Ask for the booklet, "They Have and You Can," which gives a detailed comparison of the Reo Flying Cloud and the "Ideal Car."
